

BMJ Quality & Safety

VACANCY – BLOG EDITOR (1-2 hours/week)

BMJ Quality & Safety, published by BMJ and co-owned with the Health Foundation, has an exciting vacancy for an enthusiastic Blog Editor to drive the journal's web presence worldwide. The position will require 1 to 2 hours a week, which includes reading relevant papers, writing suitable blogs, and posting these online. This includes co-ordinating the process for selecting and publicising our top 10 articles each year. The honorarium for this role will be £1,000 per annum.

BMJ Quality & Safety provides a rich mix of opinion, debate and research for academics, clinicians, healthcare managers and policy makers. It encourages the science of improvement, debate, and new thinking on improving the quality of healthcare. The journal is led by a patient-focused editorial team with a view towards helping all team members improve their knowledge with the overall goal of improving patient care. More information can be found at qualitysafety.bmj.com.

BMJ Quality & Safety already has an active blog. We are now searching for someone to support the editorial team in maintaining the journal's visibility and reach by promoting the journal's content as well as helping its core readership to stay up to date with news and developments in the field.

Candidates should be educated to postgraduate level with knowledge of the journal's subject area. Some experience of science communication and blogging would be preferred, but the main criteria for the successful applicant will be enthusiasm for the subject area, creativity, and an interest in using blogs and social media to disseminate scientific research. The role would be ideally suited to a junior researcher and they may be based anywhere in the world.

The Blog Editor will report directly to the journal's Editors-in-Chief, and may be expected to participate occasionally in editorial meetings (usually remotely by telephone or videoconference).

To apply, please send your CV and covering letter outlining your suitability for this role to Morag Thompson, Publishing Assistant at BMJ, at mthompson@bmj.com

The deadline for applications is 17th November 2024.